Artificial Intelligence (AI) is a powerful technology that enables machines to perform tasks that typically require human intelligence. This groundbreaking technology is shaping the future of industries and everyday life by means of automating repetitive processes to making complex decisions, It is used in everyday applications such as voice assistants, recommendation systems, and smart devices, making life easier and more efficient. As AI continues to evolve, it is shaping the future by improving productivity, solving global challenges, and driving innovation in countless fields. In the age of data, Machine Learning (ML) has emerged to digest and utilize infinite resource for more innovative processes and accessible intelligence. ML enables faster software delivery, more automated, efficient software testing, and better operational performance. The characteristics as 'store house of knowledge' makes Library and Information Centres more susceptible to be influenced by AI-ML.
